Rutgers Online Career Planning > Assess Yourself > Values Assessment

Values Assessment

Below is a simple values assessment that may help you learn more about your work values. Your results are not likely to provide a final academic or career choice, but may help you discover more about the values you think are important. This information could be shared with your advisors, parents, professors, and/or career counselor to help brainstorm potential college majors and career options.

Read through the statements below and rate the level of importance you place on each area. Click on "click for total score" at the end of each section and a summary of your scores will be profiled at the end of the inventory. Print out this page when you are done to have a record of your results. We recommend you meet with a career counselor to discuss your results and career plans when you are finished.

This is not a test with right or wrong answers, nor has this inventory been reviewed for reliability or validity. Your results, however, may help you identify important values and become more aware of related college majors and career options.

ACHIEVEMENT

Rate the level of importance for each value listed below from 0 (not important) to 9 (very important):

- Have the opportunity to advance to a high-level position
- Attain a high level of competence in my work
- See the end results of my work
- Set and accomplish goals on a regular basis
- Master new information and skills
